Demand grows for a caste-based census

The OBCs and the SCs together account for around 60-70% of UP's population

Brajendra K Parashar

bkparashar@htlive.com

LUCKNOW: Ahead of assembly elections in around half-a-dozen states, including Uttar Pradesh. early next year, several political parties have joined hands to demand a caste-based census and sub-categorisation of castes in the country, putting the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) in an apparent dilemma.

Uttar Pradesh, the politically most crucial state, is home to as many as 79 castes belonging to the Other Backward Classes (OBCs) and 66 scheduled castes (SCs) and sub-castes. However, only a handful of them like Yadavs, Kurmis, Lodhs, Rajbhars, Maurva and Kushwahas among the OBCs and Jatavs, Pasis, Valmikis and Koris among the SCs have been able to get political visibility with a lion's share in political power, economic resources and government jobs.

The OBCs and the SCs together account for around 60-70% of UP's population. The tabulation of the SC-ST population is done every 10 years when the census is held in the country but the last caste-wise enumeration was carried out in 1931 and the same data is taken into account for various purposes even today. Around 40-50% of UP's population is estimated to be OBC while the SC population was counted at 20.7% in the 2011 census. And in the case of SCs and STs, too, sub-categorisation of castes is not done.

On August 23, an 11-member delegation led by Bihar chief minister Nitish Kumar met Prime Minister Narendra Moodi to press the long-pending demand for counting the OBCs in the census scheduled to be held shortly.

The old demand was revived in July this year after the Centre informed the Lok Sabha that it would not enumerate caste-wise population, except those for the SCs and STs

Political parties' stand

The Samajwadi Party (SP) in UP has been the most vocal in raising the demand for the caste enumeration with the party having its eyes firmly fixed on OBCs, apart from consolidating the Yadays, its core vote bank, for the 2022 assembly election.

"A caste-wise tabulation of the census is necessary to achieve the objective of social justice because without knowing the numerical strength of various castes it is not possible for governments to plan and execute

While the Samajwadi Party in UP led by Akhilesh Yadav has been the most vocal in raising the demand for the caste enumeration. its ally Rashtriya Lok Dal led by Jayant Chaudhary is yet to take a welfare policies for them in the right way," SP spokesman Rajendra Chaudhary argued.

"It is in this context that our leader Akhilesh Yaday has often insisted on the "jiski jitni sankhva bhari, uski utni hissedari" (the more numerically dominant a caste is, the more share it should have in the country's resources) formula of social justice," he added.

Other small regional outfits, including Anupriya Patel's Apna Dal (Sonelal), Om Prakash Rajbhar's Suheldev Bharatiya Samaj Party (SBSP), Sanjay Nishad's Nishad Party, Keshav Dev Maurya's Mahan Dal and Babu Singh Kushwaha's Jan Adhikar Party that are led by OBC leaders all vocally support the demand for the caste-based census.

Apparently, aware of the importance of caste politics in UP, the Congress, too, has backed the demand. It also claimed that it was during the last UPA government that the work of the socio- economic caste census was carried out.

"The UPA government got the caste-based census done in 2011 but the BJP that came to power in 2014 did not publish the caste data although the party demanded caste-based census when it was in Opposition," UP Congress chief Ajay Kumar 'Lallu' said.

The Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) and the Rashtriya Lok Dal (RLD) are probably the only important political players that are vet to take a clear stand on BSP state president Bhim Rajbhar refused to comment on the issue while RLD leaders, including party chief Javant Chaudhary, also refrained from taking a stand so far. The RLD is the SP's potential ally for the assembly polls 2022 but does not seem to be on the same page as far as the demand for caste-based census is concerned.

clear stand on the issue.

political parties, according to political scientist Shashikant Pandey, is a step closer towards culmination of the social churning and the "second political upsurge" that began with the emergence of OBC leaders like Mulayam Singh Yadav and Kalyan Singh in UP and Lalu Prasad Yadav and Nitish Kumar in

"I see the social churning taking a concrete shape now with the regional parties rooted in castes being in a position to have their say in political affairs and dictating terms to national parties like the BJP and the Congress," he said. Pandey is the head of the department of political science in the Babasaheb Bhimrao Ambedkar University, Lucknow

Caste tabulation, a double-edged sword

The caste enumeration, according to Pandey, may, however, turn to be a double-edged sword.

"The caste data that the castebased census can yield may help governments in planning and executing welfare schemes in a better way benefitting the most backward and deprived castes that have been marginalised till date," he said.

"But it has a flip side too. And this lies in the fact that once the exact numbers of OBCs and SCs are known and made public following the caste census. it may further hit the interests of the marginalised castes if their numerical strength is found to be lower than what it is uation resources will be distributed as per the numerical strength of castes and hence the marginalised may become even more marginalised." Pandev added.

Such a situation, he cautioned, may also lead to caste conflict within the OBCs and SCs and could also further intensify the caste tension and animosity in the society in general.

"It will be very interesting to watch the after-effects of the caste-based census if it takes place," he observed.

Getting 50% quota cap removed real motive?

Observers say though many political parties are demanding the caste-based census in the name of social justice, their real motive, according to them, is to get the 50% cap on reservation removed or raised after the actual caste-wise data is available in the public domain.

"The next logical demand after the caste census is held will be for the enactment of a law to do away with the 50% cap ceiling put by the Supreme Court on reservation." Pandey said. Agreeing with him, social scientist Rajesh Mishra said, "Reservation for OBCs will have to be revised, sooner or later. The provision for 10% quota for the poor among the upper castes has opened the Pandora's Box and allayed the legitimacy of the 50% limit."

BJP'S dilemma

Although the Centre informed the Lok Sabha last month that it would not go for caste enumeration, both Pandey and Mishra agree that it may not be possible for the BJP government at the Centre to ignore any longer, the demand for the caste-based census considering the growing importance of OBC politics, particularly in UP.

"Notwithstanding political divisions among the OBC castes/ classes, no political party can afford their resentment on the issue, especially in the light of the upcoming assembly polls in UP," Mishra said.

Avoiding a direct reply, UP BJP spokesman Sameer Singh said, "The Justice Rohini Commission is already working on the sub-categorisation of OBCs and once the commission presents its report, the Central government will take a call to further promote the interests of OBCs."The BJP government, he said, gave the Constitutional status to the National Commission for Backward Classes and decided only recently to implement 27% OBC quota in NEET.

The BJP, according to the observers, is reluctant for a caste-based census because such an exercise is fraught with the danger of leading to a situation Mandal Commission report was dug out and implemented in 1990 and this situation will harm the BJP's goal of uniting and mobilising Hindus."The BJP and its parent organisation the RSS have always made a case for unity of Hindus and any caste divisions that the caste enumeration may further intensify will hamper the goal of Hindu unity. This explains the BJP's dilemma over whether to accept or not the demand for the caste-based census and sub-categorisation in the country," Pandey said..
